World Jewry Suffers Great Loss In Death Of Kubovy, Versatile Israeli Diplomat

Dr. Arieh Kubovy, chairman of the Yad Vashem Memorial authority, formerly an Israeli diplomat, died following a long illness. He was sixty-nine years old.

Dr. Kubovy took over the Yad Vashem post in 1959, and was instrumental in extending its function beyond that of a shrine for the millions who perished in Nazi death camps, says the New York Times. He used his influence to implement the original concept of the hilltop museum as a research and educational center as well as a memorial. ("Yad Vashem" means "study of the Holocaust.")

It attracts not only such prominent visitors as Dr. Konrad Adenauer, former West German Chancellor, who traveled there on his recent trip to Israel, but thousands of young Israelis and immigrants from African and Arab countries who have little idea of the Nazi period.

Dr. Kubovy was a Zionist leader who fled Europe before the spreading influence of Adolf Hitler. He settled in Israel in 1948, the year of the nation's birth. He served as minister and ambassador to European and South American countries, achieving public notice during the "Prague Trials" of 1952.

In 1952, the year after Dr. Kubovy was appointed minister to Czechoslovakia and Poland, fourteen men went on trial in Prague charged with espionage, sabotage, Titoism, and Zionism. Eleven of the accused were Jews. Among the "foreign accomplices" named were John Foster Dulles, British Foreign Secretary Herbert Morrison, and Dr. Kubovy.

Rudolf Slansky, deposed general secretary of the Czechoslovak Communist Party, was hanged after the 1952 trial for sabotaging the economy. He and ten other victims were rehabilitated during the Khrushchev thaw.

The Czechs declared the Israeli diplomat persona non grata on the ground that he had expedited emigration to Israel of Czechoslovak Jews, but the Jerusalem Government refused to recall him. He took a long leave, however, and next year was named minister to Argentina, says the New York Times. He served in a similar capacity later in Chile, Uruguay, and Paraguay.

Dr. Kuvoby, who was Arieh Leon Kubowitzky at his birth in Kurshany, Lithuania, on November 2, 1896, received a traditional educa-

A. J. COMMITTEE CHARGES COLLEGES WITH EXCLUSION OF JEWS IN TOP UNIVERSITY ADMINISTRATIVE POSITIONS

The American Jewish Committee charged that bias and discrimination were barring Jews from the presidencies and other top administrative posts in the nation's colleges and universities.

In making public a special study dealing with this issue, Morris B. Abram, president of the Committee, said: "Those responsible for the selection of men for top college posts evidently feel that if a Jew were chosen, he might be handicapped by prejudice on the part of those with whom he must deal."

The six-month research project was undertaken by the Committee's 100 chapters and units. Its results were released at its 60th anniversary meeting at the Shoreham Hotel, in Washington, says Irving Spiegel, in the New York Times. The study said that as a result of bias "fewer than one per cent of the presidents of America's 775 non sectarian senior colleges and universities are Jewish."

This, the report added, despite the fact that "between ten and twelve per cent of the student bodies and faculties at these institutions are Jewish."

Further the report indicated that of 1720 deans in the 775 colleges and universities surveyed 45 or 2.6 per cent are Jews. Twenty-nine of those are in six institutions. In the remaining 769 institutions there are only 16 Jewish deans — "again fewer than one per cent."

The comprehensive study pointed out that since 1949 there were approximately 1,000 vacancies in the presidencies of publicly supported universities and senior colleges, and yet, up to a month ago, only one appointment went to a Jew.

This appointment went to Dr. Martin Meyerson, president of the Buffalo campus of the State University of New York. The report said that in the nation's history only one Jew was found ever to have been named head of a publicly supported senior college. He was Dr. Paul Klapper at Queens College in New York in 1937.

Mr. Abram called "particularly ironic" the situation at the State University of New York. He said it was established in part following World War II because "Jewish students were discriminated against when they applied to existing colleges."

Today, he said, "although about one-third of the student bodies and faculties are Jewish, the recent appointment of Dr. Meyerson marks the first break-through at the 30 units of the state system."

The report said that of the 397 private colleges and universities that were surveyed, only five were found to have Jewish presidents. These included Bennington College; Brandeis University, which, though Jewish-founded, is non-denominational; Chicago Medical School, Lincoln University, and Sarah Lawrence College, says the New York Times. In touching on the situation in deanships, the report noted the following:

Virtually two-thirds of the 46 deanships held by Jews are concentrated in a few schools. Eleven Jews are among the 26 deans at the city University of New York.

In the remaining 769 institutions, with 1,627 deanships, there are only 16 Jewish deans, or fewer than one per cent.

In the privately controlled institutions surveyed, with 731 deans in all, Jewish deans number 14, or 1.9 per cent. In publicly controlled schools, with 989 deans, Jewish deans total 31, or 3.1 per cent. However, when the City University of New York is discounted, the ratio in public institutions is "hardly higher than in private ones: twenty Jews among 963 deans (2.1 per cent.")

The report further indicated that Jewish deans are disproportionately often found in graduate schools of certain particular types, among them schools of government in international affairs.

Mr. Abram, who is also the United States representative on the Human Rights Commission of the United Nations, voiced the hope that "once the facts become fully known, the nation's educational statesmen will act to rectify the situation."

He announced that the report was being forwarded to all groups in the community concerned with the selection of college and university administrators, including boards of trustees, boards of Regents, appropriate legislative committees and officials of the United States Office of Education.

He said that the situation in the colleges was "another manifestation in the general pattern of exclusion that has kept Jews out of various areas of decision-making in American life."

The American Jewish Committee has been looking into various aspects of discrimination against Jews in top jobs in American industry since 1959, says the New York Times, when it initiated a research project in cooperation with the Harvard Business School and the Survey Center of the University of Michigan.

"Deep, Open L… Community For Defendant, Ki… Judge, And Sympathy At Court Save Two Good Men From Prison

Two men facing five-year prison terms for a narcotics sale conviction received suspended sentences in Federal Court at the instigation of a prosecutor who could not square their exemplary lives with the crime. One of the men is a radio repairman whose small lower East Side shop has become a hub of communal activity, writes Edward Ranzal, in the New York Times. He never refuses to help a neighbor, collects clothing for the poor, finds skipping ropes for girls and engages in water pistol fights with boys.

He is Sigmund J. Ferro, 42 years old, of 24 James Street, in the shadows of Brooklyn Bridge. His basement shop there is next to St. James Church and he devotes much time to the Church's school. This is the Church where Al Smith began an "acting career" many years before he became Governor of New York.

He is also caretaker of the oldest Jewish cemetery in New York, a small triangular plot around the corner on St. James Place. This is the first cemetery of the Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue, Shearith Israel, going back to 1656.

The other man is Benito A. Cubeiro, 44, of 500 West 169th Street, a building superintendent, who is married and has two children. He was described as quiet and a good family man.

When they appeared before Judge Weinfeld for sentencing the Government moved to have their convictions dismissed. They were then permitted to plead guilty to a lesser charge — failing to pay a tax on cocaine.

Judge Weinfeld praised United States Attorney Robert M. Morgenthau, his chief of the criminal division, Stephen E. Kaufman, and Assistant United States Attorney Pierre N. Laval, who prosecuted the men, for their understanding. He said:

"I am frank to say that were it not for their interesting themselves in the basic background facts and satisfying themselves that these defendants were not the normal type that is involved in the narcotics business, the situation which now permits the court to exercise a reasoned judgment as to the sentence would not have been possible."

The conviction on the sale of cocaine carries a mandatory five-year term and this is what gnawed at Mr. Laval after he had obtained a conviction against the two, says the New York Times. He gave the following account of the case:

Cubeiro was given seven bottles containing two ounces of pure cocaine by a seaman friend, who "ordered" him to sell it for $2,000. The seaman threatened Cubeiro, who, in fear of his life, asked Ferro, an old friend, to help him.

The two defendants were arrested last December 23 when they offered the cocaine for sale to an undercover agent taken to the Ferro's store by a tipster.

The two-day trial before Judge Weinfeld without a jury was virtually an open-and-shut case. The two men were found guilty. But one thing bothered Mr. Laval. The cocaine was in seven brown bottles bearing the label of a Spanish pharmaceutical manufacturer, and the seals of six of the bottles had not been broken. He reasoned that professional narcotics traffickers would have diluted the cocaine for selling.

Mr. Laval took the matter up with his superiors. They asked Interpol, the international police organization, to check the Spanish seaman. He was found and despite his denial of any knowledge of the crime, Mr. Laval still felt there was some truth in Cubeiro's story.

Federal narcotics agents and a probation officer talked to priests and sisters at St. James. They were "unswerving in their defense of Ferro."

Judge Weinfeld noted that "the deep and open love exhibited toward Ferro by all members of the small community in which he lives had a profound impact upon the investigating officer."

Judge Weinfeld also found it "rather interesting that the narcotics agent apparently does not question Cubeiro's version as to how he came in possession of the narcotics; accepting it from a seaman evidently under some kind of feeling of concern for his own safety and he didn't know how to get rid of it."

Judge Weinfeld determined that Ferro had led an exemplary life and he said he was satisfied that both men "almost unwittingly got involved in this narcotic transaction," says the New York Times. Both the accused were placed on probation for five years and Judge Weinfeld warned that if they violated the terms of probation he would sentence them to five years in prison.

★ LABOR ZIONIST ★

Movement Of Canada will honour the memory of Moishe Dickstein, founder of the Movement in its present form and its president for many years, on the tenth anniversary of his death, at a memorial evening on June 13, at the Jewish People's Schools. Tribute will be paid to the late Mr. Dickstein for his achievements for the cause of Zionism, organized Jewish life in general, and Jewish education in particular. Speakers will be: I. M. Bobrove, Q.C., honorary president of the Labor Zionist Movement; Abraham Shurem, executive director of the Canadian Association for Labor Israel; and Shloime Wiseman, principal of the Jewish People's Schools. Mr. Dickstein was the founder and president of Canpal — Canada Israel Trading Corporation; secretary of the Canadian Jewish Congress; and a leader of the Jewish People's Schools. At a press conference which was held on June 2, at the Queen Elizabeth Hotel, representatives of four major Zionist organizations in Canada, representing the majority of dues-paying Zionists, proclaimed the establishment of the Zionist Federation of Canada. Spokesmen for it, Leon Kronitz, national president of the Labor Zionist Movement, and Rabbi S. M. Zambrowsky, national chairman of Mizrachi-Hapoel Hamizrachi, explained that the Federation is the culmination of many years of effort to bring together all the Zionist groups in Canada. Unfortunately, they said, it has not yet proved possible to involve all Canadian Zionist groups in the new federation, but they made it clear that the Federation is open to all Zionist organizations, as well as to all Jewish organizations and individuals hitherto unaffiliated officially with the Zionist Movement. All of the above will be invited to participate in the founding convention of the Zionist Federation in the fall. The aims of the Zionist Federation, said the two leaders, will be "to further strengthen the ties between Canadian Jewry and the State of Israel and to enhance its fund-raising activities, as well as to strengthen Jewish cultural and spiritual life in Canada, with particular emphasis on education and youth activities". The spokesmen announced that the executive of the World Zionist Organization and all pertinent agencies in Canada will be notified of the establishment of the Federation as the representative body of Canadian Zionism.

Although he will be wearing a cast for six weeks, he is expected to be back in action for the next game. Over one thousand fans saw Hakoah outplay San Michel, and the top scorer for Hakoah, George Krausz, came through with another two goals. The other goals were scored by Zvi Ehrenfeld, and Yehuda Naison, who got his goal on a penalty shot. An outstanding display of goal-keeping, was put on by Hakoah's goaler, Eddy Birensweig. The next game for Hakoah is on June 12, at 3.00 p.m., at Parkville Park, where Olympic V.J.C. will be the receiving team; and on Thursday, June 23, at 8.30 p.m., Hakoah will move back to Kent Park to play Ukrainia B. ## ★ CANADIAN JEWISH ★ Congress over 300 leaders of national Canadian Jewish organizations, convened at an all-day conference on the position of Jews in the Soviet Union, by the Congress, at the Queen Elizabeth Hotel, unanimously adopted these resolutions to be submitted to Soviet Authorities: (1) Restore its Jewish citizens to a position of equality with all other nationalities; (2) enable them freely to practice, enhance and perpetuate their culture and religion by removing all obstacles designed to restrict this freedom; (3) make available all institutions, schools, textbooks and material necessary to teach Jewish children the languages, history, and beliefs of the Jewish people; (4) permit the Jews freely to develop Jewish life and to associate and work with Jewish groups inside and outside the Soviet Union; (5) use all means at its disposal to eradicate anti-Semitism; (6) permit Soviet Jewish families, separated as a result of the Nazi holocaust, to be re-united with their relatives abroad. A further resolution recommends that the national executive committee of Congress name a special national committee of representatives of major national, central, and local Jewish organizations, to implement these resolutions and devise an ongoing program in behalf of Soviet Jews. Dean Maxwell Cohen, chairman of the morning session, said: "The conference is not in essence a protest meeting against the Soviet Union as a nation, nor against the Russian people, it is a conference to stress the importance of human rights insofar as Jews in the Soviet Union are concerned, and to impress the importance of these human rights on public opinion within Canada and within the Soviet Union." Rabbi Stuart Rosenberg, of Beth Tzedec Synagogue, in Toronto, stated that in spite of certain relaxations and concessions towards Russian Jewry on the part of the Soviet, the basic situation of Soviet Jewry remains essentially unaltered: As an identifiable group, Soviet Jews are subjected to a policy which can only be called forcible assimilation. Claude Ryan, editor of the French language Montreal newspaper, "Le Devoir," and James Walker, M.P., were other speakers. Mr. Ryan, comparing the position of Jewish minorities to the position of French Canada, said the lesson to be drawn from both is "that nominal liberty, in pieces of legislation, for example, means little unless it is accompanied by the liberty to develop cultural institutions. "The fate of the Jewish people in the West has always been a measure of our civilization. Whenever the Jewish people were involved, there were involved fundamental human values." Mr. Walker, co-sponsor of a private bill introduced in Parliament last session, against hate propaganda in Canada, called the position of Soviet Jews "spiritual genocide, much deadlier in the long run than physical genocide." The Hon. Alvin Hamilton, M.P., was the speaker at the luncheon session which was chaired by Michael Garber, Q.C., Congress president. He replaced the Rt. Hon. John G. Diefenbaker, leader of the Opposition Party, who was unable to attend. He said: "The Jewish people are concerned over the evidence of the reduction of freedom to practice and propound their faith in the USSR; so should we all be. Our protest, however, will have more weight if we include all people who suffer discrimination. This meeting is part of the world opinion. I want to be part of that stand." The afternoon session, chaired by Rabbi S. M. Zambrowsky, was addressed by David Lewis, Q.C., M.P., who said: "There has been considerable thawing recently in the cold war, which has expressed itself only in nominal terms for the 3,000,000 Jews in the Soviet Union. There is no use in Russia denying that there is a Jewish problem when there is a Jewish problem and it is common knowledge that Jews in Russia have no opportunities of collectively maintaining Jewish communal life. In Russia nothing is done without the formal sanction of the government. The obstacles for the Jews within the laws are the result of government action which continues after Stalinism and all it stood for has been rejected. No other country in the world suffered so much from Nazism as did the Soviet Union and no other people so much as the Jews. It should, therefore, be natural and human for the leadership of the Soviet Union to feel close sympathy with the Jews. Nothing in the theory of Communism justifies the behaviour of the Government." Resolutions were introduced by Max Shecter. Proceedings were summarized by Saul Hayes, Q.C., executive vice-president of the Congress. He said: "The Canadian Jewish Congress will continue to express the concern of the Jewish community over the position of the Jews in Russia and to enlist the support of Government and the general community in their ongoing efforts to remedy the situation."

OH, TO BE IN GRADE ONE AGAIN WITH MOTHER VOLUNTEERS HELPING TEACHER!

The Toronto Globe and Mail says: Volunteers have moved into the classroom at Flemington Road Public School: Mrs. Allen Rosenthal, vice-president of the National Council of Jewish Women, Toronto section, said that five volunteers are working with Grade 1 students at the school.

"They're not doing the teacher's work, but they're helping in the things the teacher doesn't have time to do."

The women, who have received some training, spend time with the children who need extra help. They visit twice a week.

"Often, they just lend an ear," she said. At one point during the school year, volunteers took small groups of girls into the washroom, gave them hair ribbons, and showed them how to do their hair.

"So this way, they learned a little about grooming as well," Mrs. Rosenthal said. The Student Aid program is a pilot project and was one of several services described at the annual meeting of the National Council of Jewish Women.

A tutorial service at the Lawrence Heights Community Centre started by James Steele and taken over by the Council, has provided a quiet study area for about 10 or 12 students once a week.

"There are parents who rip up their child's textbooks, because that child is further in school than the father went," Mrs. Rosenthal said. "Our aim is to provide a quiet place for students from Grade 7 to Grade 13 to study."

Volunteers found that if they couldn't figure out the new maths to help the students, often their husbands could. Help also came from others in the community.

A pre-school enrichment program for children from the Lawrence Heights Community Program has aided thirty 4-year-olds and their mothers, Mrs. Rosenthal said. A bus twice a week transports mother and pre-schoolers to the Council House on Bathurst Street. A baby-sitter is available for the children under four, classes on grooming, cooking and lectures on education are available for mother while the four-year-old becomes acquainted with books and stories and art.

"My son at two knows a certain amount of nursery rhymes, but these children don't. Some of them don't even talk," Mrs. Slamon Balick, the publicity chairman said. She participated in the program last year.

Children for the program are suggested by a social worker in the area. Most volunteers have had some teaching experience.

"It's really to prepare these children for school," Mrs. Balick said. "Many of the things that most of us take for granted, these children don't get. It may be books, or records, maybe just somebody to talk to."

Just about every women's organization has a thrift shop where members dump their used clothing. It is a money-making shop, but usually relegated to the last spot in the annual report.

The National Council of Jewish Women highlighted the thrift shop with a fashion show — of second hand goods. It might have been corny to some, but the full auditorium of women loved it, especially those who recognized their own clothes.

A white evening dress was worn with bright red stockings; purple was matched with scarlet and a burlap dress a-go-go came under an elegant black full-length evening coat, "with non-imitation ermine".

The stole of many colors by Joseph brought a loud laugh.

Stir in 1 tsp. granulated sugar. Sprinkle with contents of 1 envelope Fleischmann's Fast-Rising Dry Yeast. Let stand 10 mins; THEN stir well.

Stir in lukewarm milk mixture and 2 well-beaten eggs. Coat 1 cup chopped glace cherries with 1 cup pre-sifted all purpose flour. Add to yeast mixture with 2 cups more flour. Beat until smooth. Work in additional flour to make a soft dough (about 2 cups). Turn out on lightly floured board; knead until smooth and elastic. Place in greased bowl; grease top. Cover. Let rise in a warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour.

Punch down dough. Turn onto lightly floured board; divide in three equal pieces. Shape each piece into a ball and place in 3 greased 1-pound coffee tins. Cover. Let rise as before about 1½ hours. Bake in preheated moderate oven (350°F) for 35 to 40 mins. Makes 3 loaves.

Frost tops with thick confectioners' icing.

tion in Hebrew schools. The family moved to Antwerp, Belgium, when he was ten years old.

He took advanced studies in Antwerp and Liege, receiving a Ph.D. in classical philology as well as a Law degree. In 1916 he founded the Belgian Zeirei Zion Party, beginning a career in Jewish and Zionist affairs.

Dr. Kubovy edited Zionist and Yiddish fortnightlies. When Hitler came to power in 1933 he joined Jewish leaders in urging a worldwide economic boycott of Germany. He helped to operate a plan for exporting German Jewish funds by buying exportable building materials destined for Palestine. Immigrants who supplied the money were repaid when they arrived.

One of the founders of the World Jewish Congress, Dr. Kubovy was named head of its rescue committee and later chairman of its world executive. He and his family meanwhile had fled to France, Spain, and finally the United States.

He was one of those who appealed unsuccessfully to Allied leaders to bomb Nazi death camps or at least the rail lines carrying Jews to the gas chambers. He was one of the Jewish leaders who appealed to Pope Pius XII to insure the return of Jewish children concealed from Germans by Catholic individuals and institutions.

Once settled in Israel, he helped to organize the transfer of thousands of Jews from Yemen to Israel in 1948, says the New York Times. Dr. Kubovy leaves his wife, the former Miss Myriam Goldstein, and a son, Michel.

JEWISH TRADITION AND POLITICAL ACTION

By Rabbi Richard J. Israel, director Bnai Brith Hillel Foundation, Yale University, in the Jewish Frontier. Rabbi Israel is still out on bail after his arrest as participant in the August, 1963, Albany, Georgia, "Prayer Pilgrimage", while publicly reading a Psalm.

I think that a major factor in Jewish interest in the Civil Rights Movement has to do with this kind of enlightened self-interest. I don't think it is the only motive, but I do not think that the motive can be discounted. As an example, not too long ago I received a letter which cost me more than one night's lost sleep. It was a short letter and said this:

"Dear Rabbi Israel: Congratulations for your civil rights efforts. You have come to our town, marched on our streets, prayed on our court-house steps and been imprisoned in our jail. Now you have returned to New Haven from your mission of justice to the warmth of your home. It may interest you to know that thanks to you and your colleague's splendid efforts, last evening our city hosted the largest Klan meeting in Southwestern Georgia in the past twenty years. As a Jewish merchant whose customers have already expressed their warm interest in your prayers, I thought you would want to know how much peace and comfort your spiritual efforts produced for those of us who find in the South a home and not a place to make headlines. Sincerely."

What do I answer a man like this? Here I was, a cheap hero, while he had to suffer for my conscience. One thing that I cannot do is write him off as a bigot and forget him.

My only answer to this man, and it is not an answer for the short view and will be of no consolation if his customers stop coming or if someone puts a match to his stock, is to recall the words of the German, Pastor Niemoller: "When they arrested the labor leaders, I was not a labor leader. When they arrested the Communists, I was not a Communist. When they arrested the Jews, I was not a Jew. And when they arrested me, it was too late."

Freedom is indivisible. If your freedom is in danger, then so is mine. When the Negroes in Southwest Georgia are full participants in American democracy, then my correspondent will not have to live in fear of the welfare of his family and his business. Injustice never stops with someone else. When it is bad for others, the Jew will soon feel it, too. From our concern for Jewish self-preservation, we have come to care for the virtue of society as a whole.

There is yet another source of our values: our marginal status, the fact that we live in two cultures at once. We are Jews because we have a unique law, a unique past and a curious contemporary history. In short, we are a peculiar people.

There is the story of the hasid from a New York yeshivah who went to gather funds in a little Southern town. When he got off the train the children of the town took one look at his beard and earlocks, his broad-brimmed hat and his long dark coat and began to follow him down the street with curiosity. The Hasid turned around with annoyance and said to them, "What's the matter? You've never seen a Yankee?"

Let us analyze this story. First of all, the Hasid really does feel like a Yankee. He is much more at home in his own New York environment than he is in the little town. If he has been born in this country, as many Hasidim have been, he is distinctly different from his co-Hasidim, say, in Jerusalem, and his fellow Hasidim would look upon him in a sense as a Yankee, as affected by the American environment. But tell that to the children of the town and their response would surely be, "Man, you're the funniest Yankee we have ever seen."

Yet I am that Yankee and I think that most of you are, too. I feel like an American and my Americanism is a very important part of me. When I visit other countries, people look upon me primarily as an American; but, to my fellow Americans, I am a very special sort of an American.

If there is anyone here who thinks that Jews in America are viewed just like everyone else, I ask you to pause for a moment and consider the following question. What if the assassin of President John F. Kennedy had been a Jew? Would this have affected the Jewish community in exactly the same way as the accusation of Lee Harvey Oswald? Perhaps I am an alarmist and I am sure that we would have all survived, but the thought, nevertheless, sends shivers down my spine.

I would assert that a unique aspect of Jewish community life outside of Israel (and I am not altogether sure about Israel, either) is that we are marginal. We are almost, but not quite full citizens of the countries in which we live. Though our legal rights are full, we still feel a sense of "we" and "they." You feel this less than your parents, and your parents less than their parents, but the feeling is there nonetheless. From this feeling of marginality emerge many attitudes of the Jewish community.

Why do such a large number of Jewish students go to college in comparison with non-Jews? There are two ways in this world to achieve status. One is to be someone important, and the other is to do something important. Since we don't have the pedigree to be important, then we have to do important things and one of the best ways to do important things is to be a professional. Education is the quickest way up.

Do so many Jewish students go into medicine because of the Jewish insistence upon learning? What Jews used to learn were traditional texts and, if learning for its own sake were the goal, one might assume that as many Jewish students would study to be rabbis as doctors; but, as the old story goes, being a rabbi is no profession for a nice Jewish boy.

Is it a question of healing and social welfare? I don't know of many Jewish male nurses and even Jewish girls are under-represented in nursing. I would submit that medicine is viewed as offering quick social status, a good living with security, and independence from the non-Jewish community. You are self-employed. In short, Jewish marginality conditions our educational aspirations.

But it is not only Jewish doctors who are the products of Jewish marginality. The entire structure of the American Jewish community has been, by and large, created to provide uniquely American organizations to help us feel comfortable as Jews. The defense organizations, using the stated values of American democracy as a justification, that is, that all Americans should have an equal chance, have organized to protect the lot of the Jew in America.

Since all Americans must belong to some kind of church, Jews who have very little concern for the religious values of Judaism join the synagogue, which then serves for them as the locus of their secular Jewish identities. We have taken an American institution, the Protestant church, and utilized it so that we can feel at home in America and comfortable with our Jewishness.

It is perfectly possible to point out that the synagogue is the oldest institution functioning continuously in Western civilization, but to show that for most of its members it is still a continuation of that ancient religious institution, one would have to explain the discrepancy between the number of Jews who join the synagogue and the number who worship there.

The fraternal organizations serve the same function. Jews form parallel organizations to those operating in the wider community, giving our Americanism expression in Jewish fashion. There are no Protestant war veterans — just the American Legion. Yet, Jews who wanted an American veterans organization felt that it would serve their needs best to organize as Jewish war veterans.

I don't want to push my thesis too far, but I would submit that because we are marginal we create differences, and then these differences become a source of values for us. The problem these kinds of values raise is that along with what I would view to be a positive concern for education and the ability to criticize our culture because we are not quite of it, come less positive values: mandatory Sunday morning trips to the delicatessen and Jewish golf and bridge as essential aspects of community life.

Thus far I have attempted to indicate a number of sources of Jewish values. I have tried to show some of the kinds of values we have derived from each of these sources as well as some of the problems that each of them presents. I have suggested that I find that I can use none of them exclusively.

Let me now say that the only resolution I have found to the problems I have posed is a resolution that creates as many problems as it solves. It is, however, the only one available to me, that of personal synthesis: facing the world and attempting to deal with it as best I can as a modern Western man and as a concerned Jew.

I use the tradition as a check and as a source of social values. It cannot present me with a rule book, much as my personal temperament tells me that I want one. If the tradition doesn't, or can't, tell me explicitly whether I may endorse the use of atomic weapons or nerve gas, there are still ideas that I might be able to find that will give me help so that I am not left altogether to my own devices.
